ABSTRACT

Trend data on college enrollments for 1976-1982 for the nation and the south are are presented. Data are provided on total headcount enrollment, Black enrollment, and Hispanic enrollment for the United States and 14 southern states that represent the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB). Black and Hispanic enrollment percentages and population distributions by state are also indicated, along with enrollment by level and type of institution (public, private, predominantly black), and enrollment by sex. Detailed tables for each southern state and the nation cover total fall 1982 enrollment by race and ethnic background, type of institution, level, and full-time/part-time status. Data on biennial enrollment trends over the 1976-1982 period are also presented, along with 1982 enrollment data for predominantly and traditionally black colleges and universities and for predominantly Hispanic institutions. Data are provided for the following SREB states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia. INTRODUCTION

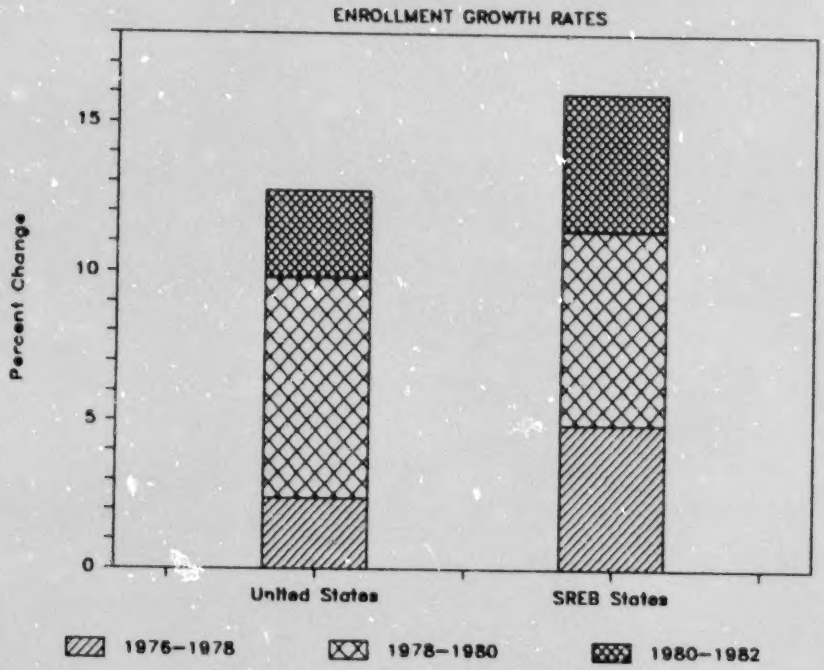
Since 1978, the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) has published a biennial higher education enrollment report. These reports highlight changing enrollment patterns significant to educational decision makers, particularly patterns of black and Hispanic enrollment.

These reports are based on SREB tabulations of National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) data tapes of Higher Education General Information Surveys (HEGIS) of fall enrollments in higher education. NCES did not include enrollment data by subject area on the data tape for 1982. Consequently, in contrast to previous editions in the series, this report does not include data by subject area.

This report provides a detailed presentation of 1982 enrollments and takes a special look at the biennial and overall trends for the 1976 to 1982 period. Significant changes in black and Hispanic enrollment have occurred. These changes will be the subject of in-depth analyses to be published by SREB in the near future.

TRENDS IN HIGHER EDUCATION ENROLLMENT, 1976-1982

Overall Enrollment Trends



- The growth of enrollment in Southern institutions of higher education continues to reflect favorable Sunbelt demographic trends. Since 1976, enrollment in the South increased almost 17 percent, compared to the overall national increase of just over 13 percent. As a result, 26 percent of the nation's college students are enrolled in Southern institutions; however, 31 percent of the population resides in the South (see Table A).

- The significant gains in black enrollment appear to have peaked in the mid-Seventies. Nationally there has been a decline in the number of black students attending college; in the South, growth is at a virtual standstill. Since 1976, the growth rate for black enrollment has increasingly trailed the rate for total enrollment so that the percent blacks are of total enrollment is on the decline both nationwide and in the South (see Table B).

- There have been impressive gains in the number of Hispanic students attending college nationally and in the South. Hispanic enrollment in the South--90 percent of which is in Florida and Texas--grew 11.6 percent between 1980 and 1982. Since 1976, Hispanic enrollment has increased 40 percent nationwide and nearly 48 percent in the South. In spite of these gains, Hispanics remain underrepresented in higher education (see Table C).

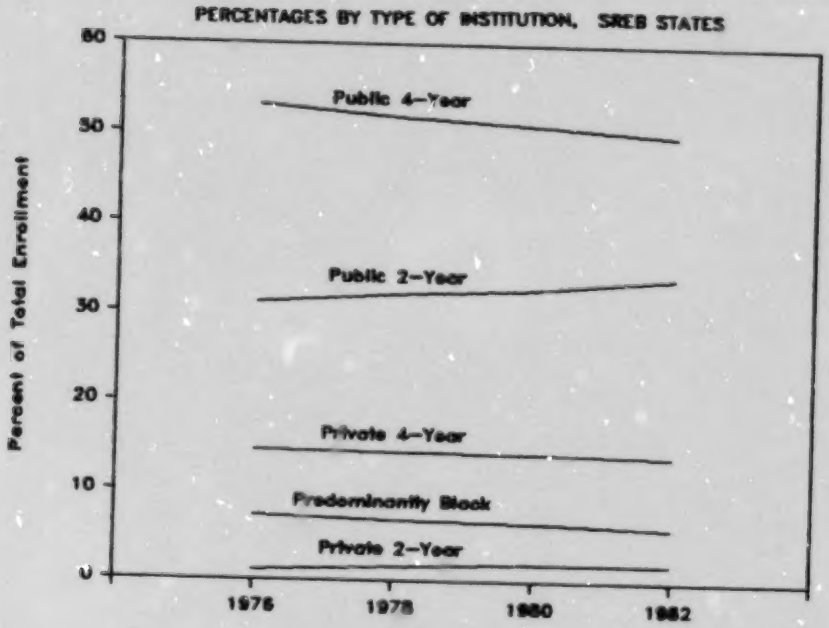
Trends by Type of Institution



- Among the different types of higher education institutions, two-year colleges led the growth--to a greater extent in the South than in the nation as a whole. By 1982, over one-third of all students were enrolled in two-year colleges. Since 1976, the percent of enrollment in public four-year colleges has steadily declined (see Table D).

Note: The percent of total enrollment for the institutional types in the SREB states is based on the SREB states equaling 100 percent. The sum of the type of institution enrollments is greater than the reported total because enrollment in predominantly black institutions is also counted in the appropriate public or private category. For the same reason, the sum of the percents of total by type of institution is greater than 100 percent.

- Predominantly or traditionally black colleges and universities across the nation had an enrollment decline of over 28,000 (-7.1 percent) between 1980 and 1982. By far the sharpest decreases in the enrollment of blacks were in these institutions. The percentage of blacks diminished in every type of institution in the South and in all but the private two-year sector nationwide. The greatest black enrollment gains were in two-year colleges (see Table E). (Note: Table F shows Hispanic enrollment by type of institution.)

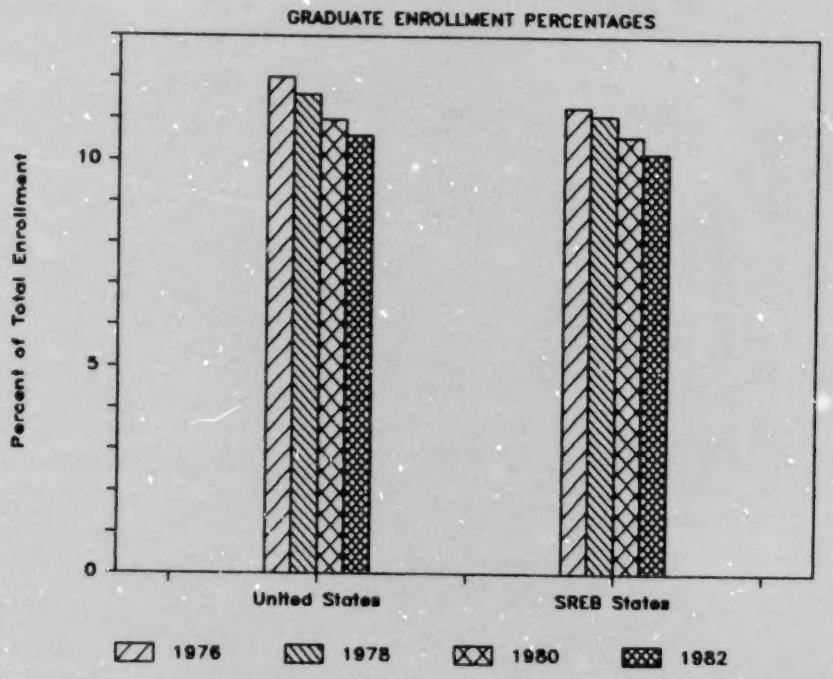
Trends by Level of Student



- Graduate enrollment in the South has continued to grow, while nationwide the growth in graduate enrollment halted. Graduate students are a smaller percentage of total enrollment than previously, though there has been relatively less reduction in the South. Despite these features, the South still lags behind the nation in the proportion of enrollment at the graduate level. Over 14,000 more graduate students would have been needed in 1982 for the South's graduate enrollment percent to equal the national average (see Table G).

* This number does not equal the sum of the subordinate columns due to the failure of a number of institutions to report enrollments by student level.

 Percentages based on 1982 data must be interpreted with caution due to the fact that institutions failed to report enrollment by student level to a greater degree in 1982 than in previous years.

Note: The percent of total enrollment for the levels of students in the SREB states are based on the SREB states equaling 100 percent. The sum of the percent of total enrollment by levels of student may not equal 100 percent due to rounding and the failure of some institutions to report enrollment by student level.

- Black enrollment losses have been proportionally the greatest at the graduate level. In contrast, increases in black enrollment have been largest at the first-professional level, but have not been large enough to alter the fact that blacks are most underrepresented at the first-professional level (see Table H).

- The Hispanic growth rate has been highest at the first-professional level, but Hispanics remain seriously underrepresented at this level, and even more so at the graduate level (see Table I).

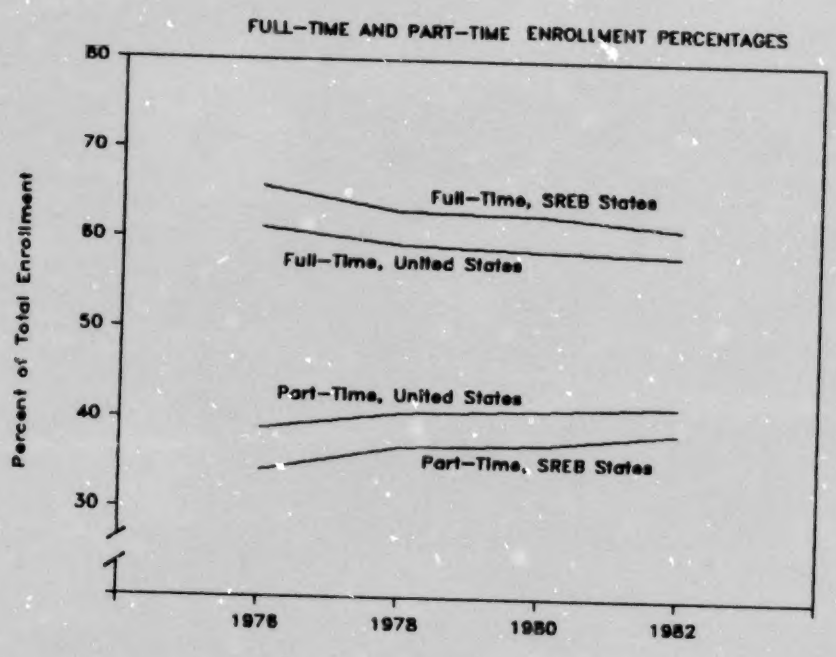
Trends in Full-Time and Part-Time Enrollment



- Since 1976, part-time enrollment growth rates have been more than double the growth rates for full-time enrollment. By 1982, part-time students accounted for nearly four of every ten students enrolled in Southern colleges and universities (see Table J).

- Black enrollment gains have also been concentrated in part-time students, although the growth rates for black part-time enrollment have been less than the total part-time enrollment growth rate (see Table K). Hispanic enrollment growth has been great for both full-time and part-time enrollment but far higher for part-time enrollment (see Table L).

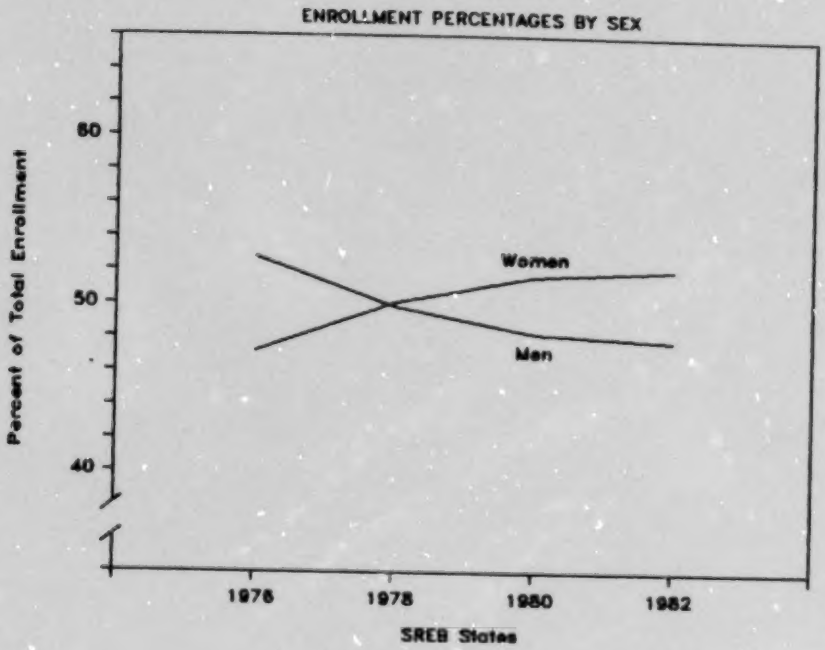
Trends in Men's and Women's Enrollment



- The majority of students enrolled in higher education have been women since fall 1980. Between 1980 and 1982, however, the increase in the number of women exceeded the increase in the number of men by far less than was the case in earlier periods (see Table M).

- Black women historically have constituted a majority of black enrollment, and growth in the enrollment of black women has been substantially greater than the increases in the number of black men. Nonetheless, there has been an erosion of the overall percent held by black women, due to the higher growth rates for women in general (see Table N). (Note: Table O shows Hispanic enrollment by sex.)

NOTES: The U.S. "All Races" percents of total for each type of institution are based on the "All Races" total. The U.S. black and Hispanic percents of total for each type of institution are based on the respective "All Races" totals. The SREB states "All Races" percents of total for each type of institution are based on the regional "All Races" totals. The regional black and Hispanic percents of total are based on the regional "All Races" totals. The SREB states black and Hispanic percents of total for each type of institution are based on the respective "All Races" total for the region. The "All Races," "black," and "Hispanic" headcount enrollment figures do not equal the sum of the subordinate columns because the enrollment in predominantly and traditionally black institutions is counted under that category and under the appropriate public or private category. For the same reason, the sums of the percents of total for the different institutional types is greater than 100 percent.

* This figure does not equal the sum of the subordinate columns due to the failure of a number of institutions to report enrollments by student level.

 Percentages based on 1982 data must be interpreted with caution due to the fact that institutions failed to report enrollment by student level to a greater degree than in previous years.
